

CHILD INJURED BY STREET-CAR

Mother and Father Heard Screams, While Crowd Looked On, Horror-Stricken.

STILL HAS CHANCE TO LIVE

Witnesses Differ in Opinions as to Responsibility for Accident.

Before the horrified gaze of her nine-year-old cousin, Mary Wagner, and a score of men, women and children, Pauline Isabelle Gregory, the tiny and indomitable daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Gregory, of 109 North Seventh Street, was run down and her head crushed yesterday morning by a car on the city street division of the Virginia Railway and Power Company. At the Virginia Hospital where she received surgical treatment, it was said last night she had an even chance of recovery and that her condition was not as dangerous as was at first supposed. The skull was fractured and the nose broken while there were cuts and bruises about the whole body.

Whether the accident was avoidable was a question on which witnesses differed. Some said that Gregory could have easily seen the child while the car was away. Others were more lenient and believed under $1,000 had been paid by the car company. The conductor, R. B. Herring, of 518 North Seventh Street, was not taken in custody.

Heard Child's Screams.
Both Mr. and Mrs. Gregory were at home at the time of the accident. The father, a registered druggist, was reading a newspaper, while his wife was engaged in household duties when they heard the piercing shriek of their child as she fell beneath the car. Rushing to the street, they were horrified to find the child lying motionless. Already the crowd of people was being removed. It was placed in an automobile truck which was passing and rushed to the hospital.

Mrs. Gregory was prostrated from shock, but yesterday afternoon had sufficiently recovered to tell the story to a reporter. She said breakfast had just been finished and her baby had been left on the lower floor, while she went to the second. She recalled that she heard the child calling for someone to open the front door, being too small to get down.

Not aware that any one was present who would let the child out, she paid little heed to the pleadings of the tiny voice. However, Mary Wagner, the child's cousin, opened the door and together the children went to the front porch. The baby tumbled down the steps and into the middle of the street before the older child realized the danger.

Crowd Quickly Gathered.
No one noticed the girl's approach. The child, said to be about five years old, was in front as it fell down upon her. Gregory jumped down his brake and reversed his motor, but it was too late.

A large crowd gathered and the tiny child lay motionless in the middle of the street. The car was being driven by a man who was not seen by the child.

Mrs. Gregory said that for a long while she has been in constant fear of her children being injured by street cars. Besides Pauline, she has two small sons and five months old and the second four years old. They are all well.
